

Dr. John Walter Warne of Vancouver died Jan. 5, 1975 at the age of 55. He graduated in medicine from the University of Western Ontario in 1947, then entered general practice. He was on the staff of St. Vincent's and St. Paul's hospitals in Vancouver, was medical director of the British Columbia Jockey Club and of the Canadian Pacific Railways' employees medical association, and was a member of the College of Family Physicians of Canada.

Dr. Leon A. Pequegnat died at Toronto Jan. 10, 1975 at the age of 85.

Dr. Pequegnat graduated in medicine from the University of Toronto in 1919. He practised for a short time in Kitchener before entering public health work in 1929 as deputy medical officer of health for the City of Toronto. In 1926 he became eastern Canada's organizer for the Canadian Social Hygiene Council, and in 1951 he was appointed medical officer of health for Toronto. During his term from 1951 to 1957 he expanded the public immunization program for tetanus, polio and diphtheria, toughened codes for food handling and storage in bakeries and restaurants, and fought for fluoridation of the city's water supply.

After retiring as medical officer of health he started a program to relieve the pressure on hospitals and provide a more personal service for patients who do not need hospitalization. His plan developed into the Home Care Program for Metro Toronto, which provides home services for thousands each year.

Dr. Pequegnat is survived by his wife Iona and daughter Ruth.

Dr. Walter W. Kennedy of Vancouver died Jan. 21, 1975. He graduated in medicine from Queen's University, Kingston in 1913 and was a general practitioner in British Columbia.

Dr. Harvey Alexander Brown died at Toronto Jan. 22, 1975 at the age of 74.

Dr. Brown was born at North Bay, Ont. May 14, 1900. He graduated in medicine from Queen's University, Kingston in 1929. After a brief period in Albany, New York, he entered practice in Cochrane, Ont., where he worked for the Department of Indian Affairs and the Canadian National Railways as district medical officer. After postgraduate studies in Edinburgh and Vienna he served in Toronto as a general practitioner and coroner for York County.

As a captain in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps he served as a medical officer in the First Division with the Royal Canadian Engineers.

Dr. Brown is survived by his widow Jean, his daughter Sandra, his son, Dr. Harvey C. Brown of Montréal, and three grandchildren.

Dr. Henry David Taylor died at Windsor, Ont. Jan. 24, 1975 at the age of 87.

Dr. Taylor was born in Toronto, Jan. 8, 1888. He received his degree in medicine from McGill University in 1918. In 1921 he established a practice in Windsor, where he became a member of the staffs of all the local hospitals. He was retired from practice at the time of his death.

He was a life member of the Essex County Medical Society, a member of the Ontario and Canadian medical associations and a charter member of the Ontario Trustees Councils. During his lifetime he served on the board of governors of Metropolitan Hospital and on the senate of Assumption University. He spent 32 years on the Windsor Board of Education and was chairman for six terms.

He was a reserve officer in the Canadian Army, with the rank of captain, for Military District No. 1.

Honours accorded him included "Citizen of the Year" in 1956 (Civitan International Award), Lamp of Learning in 1963 by the Ontario School Teachers' Federation for outstanding contributions to secondary education, and an honorary doctorate at Lincoln University. The City of Windsor honoured him by naming a school on Campbell Avenue after him.

Dr. Taylor's wife Jenny predeceased him in 1974. He is survived by several nephews and nieces.

Dr. Herbert Burton Whitman of Westville, NS died at Halifax Jan. 24, 1975 at the age of 70.

Dr. Whitman was born at Beaver Harbour, NS May 4, 1904. He graduated in medicine from Dalhousie University's medical school in 1928, then took further training in Cleveland, Ohio, San Francisco and Chicago. In 1931 he entered family practice in Westville. For many years he was chief of obstetrics in Aberdeen Hospital at New Glasgow, NS and he was head of the Westville Medical Clinic. He was a senior member of the Nova Scotia Medical Society, a fellow and life member of the College of Family Physicians of Canada and a fellow of the International College of Surgeons. He was at one time president and a director of Maritime Medical Care.

During World War II he served as a captain in the 29th Field Ambulance of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps at Charlottetown.

He was a charter member of Westville Rotary Club, a member of Westville Curling Club and St. Paul's United Church, and an ardent fisherman.

Surviving Dr. Whitman are his widow Molly, a daughter, a son, Dr. George Whitman of Westville, and six grandchildren.

Dr. Earl Glenwood Coulson of Willowdale, Ont. died Feb. 1, 1975 at the age of 79.

Dr. Coulson was born at Comber, Ont. Oct. 29, 1895. After graduating in medicine from the University of Toronto in 1918 he served overseas in the Canadian Army Medical Corps for a year and was discharged with the rank of captain. For the next 20 years he was in general practice, first in Wheatley, Ont., then in Leamington, Ont. Then he trained in radiology in Toronto and New York. During World War II he served in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps as a radiologist, with the rank of major, at Canadian general hospitals nos. 12 and 18 in England.

On his return to Canada he worked for the Workmen's Compensation Board for 4 years, served at Queen Mary Veterans Hospital in Montréal for 5 years, returned to the compensation board for another 5 years, then joined the staff of North York Branson Hospital in Willowdale. For the last 6 years he had been honorary consultant radiologist to Branson Hospital. In 1953 he earned certification in diagnostic radiology of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada. He was a life member of the Ontario Medical Association.

Dr. Coulson is survived by his widow Anne and his son William.

Le docteur Georges-Henri Courchesne est décédé à Québec le 2 février 1975 à l'âge de 81 ans.

Le docteur Courchesne est né à Québec le 2 mars 1893. Il obtint son doctorat en médecine en 1920 à l'Université Laval. Il était spécialiste certifié du Collège Royal des Médecins et Chirurgiens du Canada en anesthésie et en radiologie diagnostique et associé de l'International College of Anaesthetists. Jusqu'à 1965 il a pratiqué l'anesthésie et jusqu'à 1967 la radiologie à l'Hôpital Notre-Dame de l'Espérance à Québec.

Il a été décoré beaucoup d'honneurs: en 1942 il a reçu du Cardinal Villeneuve la médaille du "mérite diocésain", en 1966 l'Association des Médecins de Langue Française lui remet une décoration et en 1973 le Collège des Médecins et Chirurgiens de la Province de Québec lui a décerné un diplôme d'honneur en hommage à ses 50 ans d'exercice et en témoignage de gratitude pour son dévouement.

A St-Sacrement il a fondé la section de la Société St-Jean-Baptiste dont il fut président assez longtemps. Il fut aussi le premier président de la Caisse Populaire St-Sacrement.

Il laisse dans le deuil son épouse Gabrielle, sa fille et quatre petits-enfants.

Le docteur Alphonse Thomas Boudreau est décédé à Québec le 6 février 1975 à l'âge de 79 ans.

Le docteur Boudreau est né à Arianchat, Nouvelle-Ecosse le 3 novembre 1895. En 1931 il obtint son doctorat en médecine à l'Université Laval. Il a exercé la médecine générale pendant 44 années. Il fut l'un des premiers médecins de l'Hôpital de l'Enfant Jésus. En effet, en 1932 il a été nommé membre actif dans le service de médecine. Après quelques années il a quitté son poste pour devenir médecin visiteur à l'hôpital, et en 1973 il a été nommé membre honoraire par le conseil d'administration. Il laisse à l'hôpital le souvenir du bon médecin dévoué.

De 1914 à 1918 il fut sergent dans l'armée canadienne.

Le docteur Boudreau laisse dans le deuil son épouse Ginette et ses deux fils.

Le docteur Louis Roy est décédé à Lévis, Qué. le 6 février 1975 à l'âge de 53 ans. Il obtint son doctorat en médecine de l'Université Laval en 1946. Spécialiste certifié en chirurgie générale de la province de Québec, il pratiquait à l'Hôtel-Dieu-de-Lévis. Il laisse dans le deuil son épouse Claire.

Dr. Eugene Pylypuk of Welland, Ont. died Feb. 8, 1975 while vacationing at Guadalajara, Mexico. He was 53 years old.

Dr. Pylypuk was born in Alberta in 1921 and earned a bachelor of science degree and an MD, in 1948, at the University of Alberta. He took postgraduate training in surgery in New York, Edinburgh and Edmonton and earned certification in general surgery of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada. He entered practice in Welland in 1953. In 1963-64 he served on the city council.

Surviving Dr. Pylypuk are his widow Helen and son Anthony.

Dr. John Garrow Robertson died at New Westminster, BC Feb. 11, 1975 at the age of 74.

Dr. Robertson was born Sept. 21, 1901 in Montréal. He graduated in medicine from the University of Manitoba in 1929 and took postgraduate training at Polyclinic Hospital in New York. He set up practice in Tofino, a small, isolated fishing village on the west coast of Vancouver Island. There he helped establish the Tofino General Hospital. In 1941 he moved to New Westminster, where he started his practice as an ear, nose and throat specialist. He held certification of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada in both ophthalmology and otolaryngology.

He was a past president of the Rotary Club and was active in that group's international scholarship exchange program. He was also a past president of the Westminster Club and was on the executive of the New Westminster and Fraser Valley Medical Association.

He was well known as an amateur artist and had had several of his paintings hung in Vancouver and New Westminster public libraries. Dr. Robertson was also an enthusiastic angler.

Surviving Dr. Robertson are his widow Marguerite, a son John of Sidney, BC and two daughters, Dr. Janet Robertson of Edmonton and Mrs. Bonnie Hadfield of Cheshire, England.

Dr. Raymond Wilfrid Boyden of Toronto died Feb. 13, 1975 at the age of 69.

Dr. Boyden was born in Ottawa, Nov. 20, 1906. A 1924 graduate of the University of Toronto medical school, he was a gynecologist and obstetrician at St. Mary's Hospital, Toronto, in the 1920s and 1930s.

He took postgraduate training in the United States, Edinburgh and Vienna before joining the army at the start of World War II. He was with the Canadian troops in Italy and northern Europe and won citations for attending to the wounded soldiers while under fire. He was made a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order for his services in the war and was recommended twice for the Victoria Cross. He retired with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Since the war he had been a family physician and was on the courtesy staff of St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto.

Dr. Boyden is survived by his widow Blanche, daughters Angela, Theresa, Claire, Mary, Veronica, Julia and Suzanne and sons Bruce, Joseph, Francis and Raymond.

Dr. June Estelle Steinson of New Westminster, BC died Feb. 26, 1975 at the age of 40.

Dr. Steinson was born at Tampico, Illinois Nov. 21, 1934. She graduated in medicine from the University of British Columbia in 1959 and was a fellow in psychiatry of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada. She was employed at the Mental Health Centre in New Westminster at the time of her death.

Surviving Dr. Steinson are her husband, Dr. E. Bruce Steinson, two daughters and a son.